Our Kahului correspondent writes: At about 2 o'clock P. M., yesterday, November 11th, a little five-year-old Portuguese girl met with quite a painful accident. The engineer (by aid of a locomotive) was backing empty cars onto the wharf very slowly and ringing the bell all the while, when the child darted out from the end of the warehouse and attempted to cross the track and was caught between two cars, and the calf of her leg badly cut. She was immediately placed in a car and taken to the Wailuku Hospital where Dr. Sutliff dressed the wound. As there were no bones broken, she will probably be about in a couple of weeks.
